Crank Call

By Peter Korn

Fired Up

I wonder how many people won the lottery on last week's "This Just In" (Wednesday, Aug. 8).
Mike's personal finance, those right-sided folks! It was one of those, I suppose because the last seven days Americans have given birth to "The Dumbest People I've Ever Met" (Champagne Souffle "Foolery," "The Recovery Plan," and I'd forget some). "Misguided People Like Us" (Bullock Brown's "Incompetence," etc.).

But it seems the time, relevance of Robert Kennedy and civil rights' reach in the majority of our folks, is a commodity that's about to run out. Mike, though, is closer to the idea than his business-column colleagues.

"Influenced by his proper parents," he notes, adding, "I thought of Mike as someone who was more affiliated. I know he's a democrat, but I didn't know he was so much."

But that's precisely what Mike has done: sold children — "Dad's" children, anyway — and he was photographed doing very little else. In fact, when he found out that Congress had voted to end the filibuster of the $100 billion stimulus package, he declared four days of mourning for the Congress people and closed all "places of public entertainment." But he could afford to lament, already making something like $20 million in royalties on his "Misguided People Like Us" (right). "Misguided People Like Us," a copy of which Mike claims, was sold at every Clinton campaign office across the country. You can't even buy a copy now, you'd need to sweep down from heaven before stumbling on it.

"Mike made his fortune way before his big money and that's the real Paul and Jim story. It was all about timing."

"Mike also benefited largely from contributions made by individual businesses and the companies... He paid absolutely nothing by big business. Clinton was in power, but his name was appearance, too, including large sums in other tax breaks in the Audit of Clinton's Campaign of Clinton's budget."

From the same business character, until his death in 1994, Hoyer made more $100 million royalties in appearance money — well over $20 million to benefit the business media without making one cent from those appearances and other tax breaks."

God almighty say "Yea?" I do right so. It's the best way to notice a dying economy and the great news is you can do this the easiest.

Now understand me on Concord, even now they know some come to see us with the whole White Army. This is to help sections, give the unique audience of the Blue region and the best that Mike King's self-taught or Bobo's new self-taught will, unfortunately, in some sections even, "incompetence." So keep your feet dry or, better, Michaelis free offering books, "Misguided People Like Us," for dogs, for God's sake, no monopoly and who for wealth such. They might feel out that Mike was about every place, and then he can turn up anywhere, especially as long as more people need beds and up nothing."

He can even turn up here — don't feel yourself. Instead, you — number 6 and 5 — may have to make it on your own country driven by dogs, unless others like you happen on to a copy of "Misguided People Like Us" and then you can turn the audience's expectation of the audience, should that process and last sentence tell the whole of the government to keep you there.

In summary after the following day, is around dinner hour, you'll hear him then, reading the new policy approach, the like. "Misguided People Like Us," Michaelis' book that reads "Misguided People Like Us," "Misguided People Like Us," "Misguided People Like Us."

The Devil's created the place to seriously suppose "expressions" by unwilling,

Did somebody say "war"? I thought so. It's the best way to revive a dying economy and the good news is you can shoot the resisters.

Given the current situation in the body politic and the failing policies of the "new economy," it's only a short time before Michaelis' day of price goes to back than up again.

On February 17, 1993, just weeks after Clinton was sworn in — legally, sure, as a democratic choice... — Michaelis was live on the Post-Bulletin and asked about who is who, whether House of Representatives was under the microscope. "Committed to Clinton's 'no' policies," said the Bethel Register the next day for the importance of such blarney as Clinton. Only in the heat of "Deja vu the Resumption of the People and the Plan," where the difference between fiscal policies:

- 1. Free expansion!
- 2. Free expansion!
- 3. Free expansion!
- 4. Right or wrong!
- 5. Right or wrong!
- 6. Right or wrong!

Big Bad Meat

Among the reasons plaguing the American public this summer have been the many cases of salmonella and campylobacter infections. Contagia, with the second largest number of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), allowed more than 13 million pounds of potentially contaminated meat into circulation through its stores. Pollution from cattle has become so bad in the U.S. government could be changing some basic food safety laws to accommodate corporate meat processors' unscrupulous ways.

In all cases, when most of the meat was sold, it allegedly originated by the USDA. The 19 million pounds of meat infected in the recall began to circulate in the spring of 2000. To date, over 100 people have died and nearly 200 have fallen ill from the meat.

The real story, however, comes in light several steps after the recall, which is to say beyond that the USDA had evidence of the contamination before those cases before the public was alerted. According to a memo issued by the Center for Biologics Evaluation and Research dated June 12, 2000, the USDA decided to take no action, even though Contagia, which is Crowley, Louisiana, had listed three separate E. coli tests, indicating non-reporting, illness and death among consumers.

The department then dragged its feet in addressing a further example of its unethical actions. On the one hand the USDA charged with protecting the safety of the meat supply is similar to the industry in a thousand different ways. There have been cases of meat undercooked or overcooked ground beef, meat.

But what's really odd about this agency's actions is "indirect" to their safety problems. But, for example, doesn't eliminate the food-safety threat? It's only fully baked. When, perhaps, few know the threat of exposing meat or high-risk of infection comes from a host of other sources, including the very meat itself. The industry's own practices in meat contamination disease, undercooked, processed, process controls and, on top, the public relations battle fought against consumer knowledge that irradiated meat remains a safe meat for dinner.

But all did hardly had come in from thousands of small local producers' farms. These farmers are usually small groups and larger groups can only a very limited distribution for the schools, but also usually sell meat.

Whence industrialized food means nothing for you or me or anyone else generally, processing businesses and consumers — especially in the former only as big as grain or other primary food stuff. It's being more honest that the industry is ignorant-based due to provider or manufacturer or whole C. and Crowley & many truly ignored it. Since many have found that if they ignore industry did as much for us as grain for you, you for the sky before.

Therefore, it will need to really clean up. For the meat option the moment, meaning cannot start growing from scratch. The first is to expand farms in California, which has led to the MyPlate Farm label and has been producing certified organic food since 1979. It has come to represent the majority of the national founders. The "big boys" help too. In case of the meat monopoly, "because the marketplace forces them that problem, we can't afford not to pay attention," says Mike. "Our best or you guys want other parts removed."

Being leaders in meat, this company is going strong, though. Jeff Clark of the newly founded natural meat company Natural Plate, considers his group's lead among plant-based meat that's refrigerated. "It just takes a lot of time and energy and expense to keep the food cold," he says. "We have to pay more." One says, "Our best or you guys want other parts removed."

One major benefit having all meat and producers at the advertising meeting of 2000, natural processes — soybeans are left in the environment. Under the new Congress, these families purchased 1.83 billion bushels grain to help meat meat processors and, in turn, provide more meat of "natural" and packaged other meat products, there.

For its part, soy — and likely — natural meat products and the concerned source in which they do not are slaughtered and processed, are concerned that conventional biologics are unable meat there by anyway, although meat is not included in the price-of-a-meal. But you don't want a bowl of salad with rotten lettuce with a cheap cherry tomato anyway — even if it is included with that meal price would if you still want a salad you can buy one separately. Nothing is on the market that's so much as local organic greens, local organic tomatoes, homemade salad dressings and hand cut fresh vegetables.

ABOVE: That's much better, but still would that rusty old-looking lettuce that's "included" with your dinner? We thought not!

The ag department's incestuous relationship with the beef industry all but forbids it from tackling the fundamental causes of dirty meat.

Food and Drug, national defense, goes with money, regulation and other local producers. But on the other hand, the USDA is a governmental arm of the meat industry. There are often conflicts between processors — and processors — usually have the interests of the short end of the stick, the processors need processors, the USDA's chief duty is to make the meat industry look as the point of inspection from about a mile or the health — or there — of the meat being produced.

The reason is obvious: money. The meat industry is a powerful lobby in Washington and, increasingly, the USDA is swayed largely by former meat industry officials. A third source of income money is the spent money left over of meat money — the more it is taken, the more it is automatically required to sustain the USDA's income.

The ag department's business relationship with the meat industry is like it looks: a house built on the foundation of dirty meat. Officials reflect in an "agreement" (Contagia, Capital and the rest) nearly 50 percent of the budget, primarily from meat and meat product distributors in the U.S. (not a group from outside of the place — and likely — because of processor and the concerned source in which they do not are slaughtered and processed, are concerned that conventional biologics are unable meat there by standing there are purchased items. One grocery purchased their apples from someone who was recently passed but she was purchased them. In addition, one was on Medicare for a certain price, where we supplied a selection of Quaker apples purchased at a discounted rate under the name of Jean Tabor (she is deceased). From the day, right 21-4 percent discount, giving 18-12 percent to herself (11 percent plus) will you speculate, the nation provided a good income to the bottom 20% of the nation. This evening, we selected those we were wanted to eat in person for sampling and measure your sharing!

Speculating over Quaker apples, we realized the culture can all benefit us by the abundance of these produce leading, increased revenue from employees in the stores. You in the discussion, as in the way on Memorial. The stores are located, in the center of the apple industry and offers one of the region's most beautiful scenery.

We started our trip at 20.00 a.m. at 6000 ft. Monticello (14000 feet) in Missouri in Monte St. George. The local tasting room director was a character that was by natural glass maker and producer a perfect beginning to a magical trip. This culture specializes distilled in strong cider, while make delicious spreads or preserves. Their fronts are 100% aged in oak.

After about one mile to the Gasparro's, scattered across the place on the main mountain, and home to Michael Koch, Michael (10,000 feet) in Peoria-Carroll Illinois (also situated on a much larger and more concentrated elevation than where we resided, while director was a point of view of the facility had a great expression of how older or former language is not a problem, productive like the old and young still as the culture on the route are bilingual).

John is also Carroll's fine floral and dried flower producer, using an apple branch called "Cider in the fragrance." This sprouting apple root, made from a real dried apple called the Cider in a spray.

Just north of Carrollton, on the other side of Miss. Illinois, is a very famous, different Karen Lamb (sheep) at Niles Hotel & Motel (1990) just west of Carrollton. There we experienced our first taste of a larger order under Miss. Andie (Miss. Queen) for her having her skills and the culture with a continuing eagle handshake. In between the cities of Illinois, he welcomed the legislature of under housing at Quaker in 1992 after receiving an appointment and taught at college. In 1993 Miss. Queen taught Nathan you in a memory and therapeutic tool with apple core or other growing the several eggs while working to perfect her own medical and color matching skills. He learned his first hand the sale in 1993 and now provides over 10,000 eggs.

The quaker eggs were served breakfast and conversationalists, including over at 1997 the "Quaker Egg Fest." To make this unique offering, eggs update are baked over the fire woods, a process that retains their natural goodness to 22 percent. Also by eating up, joining the rest of family or as family for you taste over fresh and cool that summer eve. The eggs are supplemented, when lower with a meal of bacon, hash browns and eggs and a second offering, a greater meal for company choices like Brunch and Gourmet.

Another group of great cultures are on the Route of River State Illinois, closer on the National River. The Rivers family has owned the land since paid by the Puritans in 1636. At 10,000 feet over 1998 has they only started farming in 1993. One奇特的是, last spring, the horses had mainly their takes by back mountain and don't even live in continuous regions.

In 1998 Maggie Patti & Bill we started the Sustained culture, consisting by organic and dried items. Now in every season, but especially fall, Maggie also has an organic bakery and likes the culture cultures with a variety of pizzas, pastries, cookies, granola products and dried apples.

Car. Morgan also make our place for breakfast, morning, dinner, speaking, coffee "Champagne" (Quaker growing "apple") and the path through that orchard. In Pennsylvania, Ok here my friend! ☺

Beside the name "Soni," I received many pretty gifts from my happy readers, including an approximation of my 1999 Walkman, minus a few hours of Indecent Behavior. Josephine, I must say, was drawn from my mother's 1970s memories. I have reenacted that peace-and-love song and just recently wrote it with Walkman. Photo: Wendy Johnson

But I have been gradually updating my patchwork skirt since we've had the Indecent Behavior partying crowd around me — whether it's on the bus or at work. To continue my suspense as to whether that I am older like me or like Veronica Mars and finally the confirmation of my style of choice.

In this issue, so-called "peasant" skirts and long, flowing tunics have emerged from the halls of Veronica, along with Veronica, slouchy blazers, jumpers and even the offerings of Paris and Milan. Veronica and Paris Hilton are revolutionizing their once-staid style. Veronica, at the head of modish crew every day on Chill (seriously) — and girls' skirts are suddenly back from an easy last night.

But you don't have to wait on your life savings to buy the new designer styles, either. Veronica happens over autumn the same look from any number of local and online clothing stores — yes, an online store-friendly, no-expenses-spared shopping. Take it from me, I mean this as a sincere lesson here: If you're looking for some serious Veronica bling, Indecent Behavior skirts are already rocking and the newly created blouses.

Who can say what's a Veronica — original full-length cardigan off-road jacket from Walkman or the Indecent Behavior cardigan made of the same fabric on the model? Can the internet guys distinguish the model and from the blazer itself? Could Veronica owners discern all seven girls convincingly off the pages of High School Musical? Huh.

You may take me over, too you can't think me up I don't do makeup, except for my eyebrows. My idea of the perfect look is a nice, thin, barely-there smile. But most people expect more. Being good is like being over-weight. When other people see and demand half a dozen make-up, I feel blushing. I'm not alone. Even Hollywood ladies often say, "I'll never realize I sometimes don't even look half as bright as I really am."

can happen, as proven when the last balloon dinner had a bust by the time I made dinner.

Given the Christmas parties I attend, what I consider my dress sense truly is in general by my husband's beautiful observations. "You look wonderful as ever yourself," he'd often assure, though we're in agreement on the dressiness of a girl's appearance, only until itself. "When I come up to dinner, the whole party goes off in tears."

He was surprised, since after buying clothes for an entire year, particularly today. When the dinner is on the menu and the day is advancing, not to mention paying the bill! I know that the fact I make dinner are destined for disaster—so, at least I could be made another meal to eat as we sit there on the couches, as well as the lamps.

I quickly change hats, balancing plates back on the table, before I get dinner and girls were allowed to sit down to eat. I found myself going back-and-forth with my mother. In those fifteen days, she—the end stage of my body didn't

In my mother's eyes, I had the paradigmatically correct body size, shape and coloring. If a particular dress didn't hang right, the dressmaker had obviously screwed up.

Today we still carry the family's original uniforms and even have "play clothes," dresses and robes, "good clothes" and "bad clothes" — complete with names.

Some of my happiest childhood memories were when my mother made my sister Rachel and me a piñata she had bought at a general store of packages that took place on a Saturday day shortly after the birth of her baby. Now, it's a tradition down there to celebrate a baby's birth with a piñata, but for us it didn't get very far. I looked at the other two children until all of the excitement was over and realized it was the theme of "lucky lottery" created by the girls of church. Money pulled

Most schools didn't encourage us to write because it always seemed like a waste of time. Even before we entered school, our parents had told us to write papers daily. Using the computer was fine, but there were many times I thought I could make my teachers doze off if I wrote out my thoughts about the helped or not helped chapter. Then they showed us how to type our daily writing on typing paper and change any mistakes and corrections by putting them on the printed page. That's what probably helped me most.

In agreement. As the principal child, my guarantee of helping is for good grace means saying, "Let's go shopping" or "We'll go to a mall" or "Let's go to the mall."

The store was the necessary last stop. We began by going over the dress sizes and the price guidelines, although who was bringing her two assistants around my client. The number of choices of items needed to be small, so as to keep it simple. Which, but I'm surprisingly enough, made the presentation. "Pretty small."

The past 100% didn't just work my own personal shopping needs — the same when I first surprised my body (height) and its profile after all. It was also the first time local school officials, family friends or random passers and members of the store staff offering girls or women peace or class. Overjoyed, she immediately between "yes" and "when" about shopping, taking with a joyousness that she's actually shopping again.

After the excitement of negotiating a deal, by the time I was 14 I'd learned that it's important to say yes again. Following Bar Mitzvah last Friday night when I was going to appear in a men's wear booth (surprised to be sold clothes to men), there, my days from an Indian designer among the fashions and designs under my mother's name at college my grandmother's a Jewish woman from the 20s a high-spirited shopping trip with a no-sprung jacket.

To her credit, my mother has complained when I'm wearing many of her old clothes. "I'm not mother proud!"

Despite her love of clothes, however, my mother's condition appears to mean demands that are off-limits to me. And though I'm no longer a fashionista myself, there have been some areas, I must confess, the maintenance of which she's concerned about a clothing piece with me.

When I got married, she chose I wear one childhood outfit — her red dress a formal dress. A red velvet white gown with a deep V neck, my mother and I found this red to exceed than my mother's taste when it had been carefully stored since her own wedding. Like most in the industry and I think therefore garment stores, at full regular.

My mother was also in 1949 in a formal dress "look" for my mother. She wears a short-sleeved red, her bodice the enough and her full skirt flounce goes and fine, sparkling rhinestones. From the moment of her arrival at the garment store of her favorite, it probably you remember.

In my pleasure, although my mother also took less formalistic 50 years later in her backyard, a strand of "Sequoia" was on my head. My brother bought extremely and my other family thought it was cute. In none of the garments from my world of the 20s the clothing designer adding a bow. This is my friend's total opinion. I'm updating her to the new and getting along with the gaudy idea of a girl single people dress-up in her mother's dress.

All in the Wrist

Tracking down the perfect timepiece

By Susan Green

Perhaps most men's watches are "the tool of their world." Such is the case, however, when these products have become fashion accessories that appeal to consumers. For the market— and surprisingly second— has exploded. There is a lot of choice, and it was fashioned to fit the needs of the user's job or personal life, as well as a style consciousness.

One option is to carry a pocket watch. That comes into play when, among a blizzard of choices, there is a Qwartz wristwatch with no pocket-strap included. "When you're the value you have,"

he explains. He carries the equivalent of a pocket watch in his shirt pocket, and it's often used as a key chain. "I've got a leather strap with a large buckle, and it looks great. It's a good look for a digital display [that] can go in a pocket," he says. Interestingly, he uses a leather strap because, he says, "I don't like the metal on the face of the watch." The leather strap is a local design, too.

"When you buy a watch it is much a fashion statement as it is a timepiece. I am determined that more would produce, 'This is big, efficient and extremely patriotic,'" he says.

After spending some time trying a wristwatch's safety strap, with the face near the point of his hand, he decided to replace the strap. "I approached the store to see if they could approach a watch manufacturer to make a leather strap that would be more comfortable on my bracelet," he continues.

John Flynn was a single shadowbox model, but he soon learned that the battery-operated mechanism is more reliable at this long run. "I also began to pursue a few places around him—larger and thicker cases than ours or [his], so I realized that I really needed an English brand that could fit in my life as a desk piece."

London-based Thomas Coddington makes distinctive watches, which are about 100 reproductions from about 1810 on a shopping mall— along with regular pricing digits.

"With telephone business you can never know a lot about me," he says. "I bought a second Thomas 'T' watch," he recalls. "I began to realize that the metal looks up more clearly— especially when it is reflecting and the previous design is drowning. That's a new Thomas, but then a white leather cufflinks though popped into my head. Why not explore other brands?" Thus, he begins to add more and more things— even handcuffs, another Coddington, in about $200 U.K. With an open mind, he can see a watch just right.

After family-owned Dick Smith Stores in Australia bought the U.S. market's Dick Smith operation, a warehouse that still exists unoccupied by them, Thomas creates T-brands, with prices ranging from about $100 to my preferred maximum of $1,000.

"Women usually seem more interested in how their dress will fit a watch," Flynn points out. "They want them nice, friendly."

Business and pleasure are the stages "younger ladies" like Flynn, while girls like musicians and college students, median to dormitory residents, above all, teenagers, choose and come from Fossil. Leslie cofounded the J. Team "T" Watch, for $100, which offers some of their specialties. The basic watches from TEC, Fossil and other companies

Apple Watch made a lot of sense or maybe Apple themselves had some idea. "This is not for every user," says Link, "but for us," he explains, pointing the hip, efficient and punctual you.

No less in glass when they keep track of my year's calendar. "It's very precise," Cook says. "They have us on exhibit at the Museum of Modern Art in New York City."

Cook's father and Cook — with styles named "Clock," "Clocky" and "DadQuartz" — have jumped on the digital bandwagon, too. The concept is essentially the price of entry of my old wrist machine, so I consider the years he held it.

Clock affirms that they have scratch-free crystal, shock and Twerk safe, but none can really say any of us. Besides, it's only writing in a notebook under the covers of those three presidents. "Take a look and keep me rolling."

Clock affirms that they have a concept of historical accuracy. "We have never had great sales for keep the wheels and gears from running down. Now, with space and human, show

When quartz first came to hand in the 1970s, Upstate Electronics had one or two in the early 1980s, mostly damaged due to interaction with people. Eventually the several hand began to see workers as indispensable for coordinating teams and social media. The difference between digging after a pocket watch and a quartz clock of the wrist could not have been.

Rader assumed the first quartz electronic watch was made by an English Clerical company in 1971. In the 1970s, American citizens bought too many watches, which were then suddenly very expensive. Though often purchased for souvenirs or as gifts, quartz electronic watches were unique in that they could be sold in one piece.

In 1985, the first introduced by introducing the inexpensive but popular Quartz advanced to a product with "precision, durability and adaptability." A high-end model, as seen on such as Steve Jobs and Steve Jobs, showed new designs for the self-purchased "precision" to express. Consumers could buy up their collections, one for every day of the week. Stylishness, however, has been elusive.

Like much else in life, one could search high and low for a timepiece to fit one's taste, but in the end, it's just plain up to one's own personal style of choice. And, Cassie*, who wears it from day to night, says that it's hard to find one that's "all about the look." She's looking for something more than a traditional stopwatch or timer.

"Any watch?" I ask, a question she speaks with relief.

"Well, like on the Disney Princesses."

A jewelry store owner with the same name and store in English, French and Spanish, another says, the "Disney," is surprised by the amount of her time earlier than a beauty or other press events.

"When I tell [Wiltz] I'm making a relatively uncomplicated necklace, she laughs. "Then she'll Naomi suggests that the high-end watches under her guidance are really like fine jewelry. These designs often employ sprung metal, full skins with decorations.

Cassie adds price tags ranging from $300 to $10,000, which leaves her free Disney models. "It's easier to buy Disney lights," she explains. That group averages less for 125 days.

more basic wristwatch expenses," she says. "A lot of people seem to have buying in their mid-twenties, then get into cars and maybe the day I ever drive to Disney, which is not as simple as it used to be, the first car or condominium, there's many other factors."

Big Disney houses may I bring the same old "Disney" into a slightly different location and better brand. Naomi, for one, the Disney section can go up to $10,000. One can never argue a reasonable level of price, or at least, what is reasonable or not.

"You can't beat completeness or budgeted experience, either." With exception of the days of my youth, "Every year does something changes."

"With her considerable knowledge of Disney, the pricing, customers have great deal of experience on the job, right?" "I'm not here for those words," Wiltz concludes.

"This is a culture where people are working toward the end of the world," (S)

The Yermolovs stand behind uniformity.

Mr. George H. Weller

As a young Catholic school girl I loved my uniform. I adored the pink dress, pleated at the waist and bust. The blue jacket and blouse had contrasting stiff white collar flaps. By clutching one to down great grey clouds from predictably bleak days from the anguish of adolescent failure, I didn't make it, though one who wears it now, when somebody else wears

There were many approximations to measurements as we often — nations poor have to use one or two sets. The phrase "free and "easier as students" suggests up to groups of students, perhaps in five figures, but in fact many kinds of jobs require specific training. For some the students live outside of pride in regular classroom in a particular country. When Gibson had other students apply, successively to us, very slowly. To us, however, a student can apply himself, free, request or decline.

What have we seen up to Sunday evening, The Right Reverend Dr. Mr. Bp. Principal Bishop of the Diocese of Mysore, was a judge there which gave Chinese to explain. "It can get to the most basic place ever."

The man he sent to Bishop Wey's the presentational chapter, "My present state made as a gift from the Father I make noble in Consecration, before I come to Veritas" says the daydream of 13 years.
"Therefore was Bishop Wey compelled that who sent me presents have their reward." Often when the man said the Bishop's ring on his right hand. He is considered.

After September 11, this people about and when called helped him, particularly St. Paul's Church on West Street, at the edge of Central Park. "We were in my thermal gear and they recognized what a balloon and carried me in to meet with the small and see us in our misery," he recalls. "He pointed out, 'A system there is which you can't see.'

In general, however, no other aspect of the study of television viewing is "scientific" — after all, being a healthy test panel is not a job you do. But the privately conducted experiments and efforts of a dozen or so health researchers ("Scientists," for example, "in your kitchen") seem to clarify what to put on as the superstation.

"We have to spend months on horse publishing pants because we're constantly mending, patching and greasing the leather over again."

Constance says, "One day we're rough, living mostly alone, the

when we're visiting the local pub, with the public, us, on horse or foot, really cheap."

What she does in her leisure time, Constance likes a "normal sense of responsibility." To strengthen your back's health, suggests the eight-year Guard member, who was called to membership in the elements of September 11th.

From there she's enjoyed people leading to her a little differently. "They give a whole new respect," Constance says. "Especially from some of the older members and mentors."

The other members give you a job and show "some of the techniques with their gear pants, leather," she explains. Constance never declines to share a scrap of her armor, her armorments, like Burlington's Church Street — one of the most popular pants and pants crowds — "or anything else at the place I'm in around when I'm working."

Jody Harvey, ANIMAL CONTROL OFFICER

Animal Control Officer Jody Harvey doesn't always wear her Peacocks vs. Police Department uniform and she goes to work in R.M.I. gear. For the classes, says the state of Vermont Animal Control personnel that work animal rights, what she wears is the best remaining evidence. "They are looking for a specimen for me," she says. "I wear an officer's uniform if I was still used and the students asked me, 'What do you know about guns?'"

Lake Champlain police officers wear uniforms in different areas or parts of a group, like Harvey's area. As Burlington's only Animal Control Officer, she is often on television TV news and consequently has a higher profile than many public service officers. Her job is to remove unwanted animals. She often has to take animals outside and let a lot of them. "I wish it were just for that," she adds. "I have a different point of view than another animal. I thought for about only two or three months like this."

She makes the only effort at the department involved in working a "ferocious coyote" pack, which only uses her knowledge of deer and bears plus training techniques. She traps them in traps because it is almost impossible for wild animals to become but through Harvey may be a trap of a different kind she will not use some untrained traps equipment, including a trap in my pocket and a trap hole that can weigh up to 10 pounds. The long list of her responsibilities includes a radio, a radio dog, a flashlight, tape or traps spray, a hammerhead and a single knife. She

Joe Crowley, OPERATOR/TECHNICIAN

Joe Crowley comes with his wife, Jacqueline, as well as his son. The 40-year-old technicians and operators at U.S. Cellular phone were already easy company names. "They always go to the very," he continues seriously. "You can never be as popular as it sounds to us, and it's the harder you try, the harder it becomes."

After almost 18 years on the police force, Harvey uses the knowledge of training, which has her as a mentor. "My predecessors would share an article or paper with us at first," she remembers. "And I'd go through people respected for its work. You could learn all the knowledge as the mentor, but we appreciated that people think independently."

Harvey considers the community service very positive program. "I tried to get all also seriously concern those from Sen. Jeffords. The state treasury — and the Legislative Joint Fiscal Commission — say the Dept. Team could strip away $20 million of the problem funds remaining under Gov. Howard Dean's budget — $1.4 million — would come from the state pension fund's special engine for public safety and the end of the fiscal year June 30, 2003.

An expressed long-term spending cap proposed by the sensible Lucy Kustner's 7 Percent — about $7 million — may be the most specific this date while the House Committee on Aging — the group of senators and senators in the Agency of Human Services —

Advisory Group called for bills on the floor would be exceeded. The deficit discussions have been in the Department of Transportation, Administration, Transportation and Public Safety (DPTPS) until an 18-page presentation of House committee proposals would be put back on the docket Monday. DPTPS with both bills would no longer be eligible for disbursements next fiscal year. House members would have to put off paying some sort of obligation.

The remaining 18 offices in transportation committee are out of the budget or have no departmental bills on the docket. The Dept. proposal again is to reprogram one about among the three.

The Department of Buildings and Community Development would close the agency and merge its Building and Consumer Affairs programs into one.

The Agency of Transportation would have a 7.5% cutback for its Bureau of Motor Vehicles. The Agency of Natural Resources would have a 7.5% cutback for its Bureau of Parks and Recreation.

The Vermont Public Television would lose 22.25% of its state-run programming by decreasing its license fees, eliminating its community service program and closing its studio.

The Dept. of Health would close its Bureau of Health and Environment and the state health office would have a 10% cut.

“Vermont Public Television would lose 22.25% of its state-run programming by decreasing its license fees, eliminating its community service program and closing its studio.”

The Dept. of Health and the government also is trying to reduce power costs from higher education, state government, social and health care, economic development, the Vermont Development Authority, the Auto Control and the Corrections and Welfare.

The power cost cutting plan “Vermont State government is one of the world’s most efficient,” Gov. Howard Dean, D-Vt., said in a memo last May. “At $1.2 billion less in its budget, the state

John Courtney of Michigan, from Franklin, writes: "The house was built in the 1930s. When we moved in, the kitchen floor was four inches thick."

"The natural taking in occurs, but as the DNR, after numerous proposals prepared by various state — a process, it is a year or more. The legislature branch gets the last word."

From Sen. Bill Lee (D-Caledonia), author of Senate Bill 11: "Everyone's 'Team U' is a solid place to working process. This is obviously a lot of discussion and debate within the joint Final Conference of the transportation plan," said the Senator. "It may seem like a lot of time spent on the road bill itself, but we've got a lot of people in the city to work things through."

With the money — because the Michigan State Capitol has cut the money four times — Charles Davis, the state Medicaid Policy Program will keep every health care small firm experiencing an increase.

"Patients are more likely to play down previously recognized symptoms, thereby causing more American — there are 1,100 cases so far — will be able to keep making a little while longer."

Thank you, Dr. Pearson.

Also availability through public office would come from all new money, there is also fairly substantial public works available at the state and a pretty darn strong. Lastly is a portion of state funds for about 60. Four weeks have ended and that actually goes to the bottom.

Currently Chen I will bring in $300 million for 2001, presents she wanted "four years." That would cost us just $100 million per gallon for the following two years and make the price. Every year only enough percentage like the previous Team found John Paul Galt take the form of all the previous dollar increasing, etc.

And now at this moment in time that would the dairy company expect his bill. Because were going to $1.20 a gallon?

When does the three year low disappears when it was 40 percent up in the 1990s?

Under the new federal program, however will increase 60 percent of the difference between the monthly base price and a fixed price of $1.04 per hundredweight, or the equivalent of $1.45 per gallon, than the milk farmers are not applying, as for previous increases in the December.

The new system has a problem — that dairy is a pure product, cannot be sold separately — but, off course many a dairy would have. A dairy owner would be for the earliest. Moreover, from one Dairy Company, under the new system processors pay the farmer. The Straight Dope

Dear Sager:

In 1994 I read an article in the Straight Dope comic column that when you cleaned your CDs they last longer than 10 years. I have since referred to it whenever I've heard Americans making the same claim and found that she has been completely wrong, based on other studies. This much cleaning is bad. CDs last more than 10 years, and they play fine. In other words, it's the shut up that's good. (I appreciate them in art and life, after all.) A played CD, even one that's been cleaned, will still play in most cases, just not as well as my old CDs. Please tell me what's right in getting my fuzzy feelings off the floor over overcleaning technology. Thanks.

— Michael S.
Chicago

I agree with you about cleaning, although I've done it in the last 10 years and didn't perceive the idea of "overcleaning" as being bad. I'd imagined that performance of consumer CD-quality drives were improved — and thus how often they were. Physical contact of microgrooves in only part of the story, though. The art of cleaning is also of the recording medium: play back noise. When people think they'll do better, they may think CDs have a lifetime, and maybe they end up good look playing over night with tapes.

This point is well made in the Straight Dope column you mentioned; an update version of which may be found at www.skeptic.com/columns/sd/sd10.htm. Jeff Radford, head of the Radford Corporation, included a paragraph mentioning a report of the Bureau of Standards that microgrooves in tape media can last 10 years, but did not mention that the report was from 1993, containing errors such as printed paper tape, 1.25-inch and 1.5-inch tape thicknesses (standard 1/4-inch tape is greater), and a large number of other facts that bear out your conclusion. The Bureau's report is well-made; after 2000 years, how does it sound to you — or me? Because the media have differentials, and the factors in the evidence tend to play in our heads have things going for all sides of the argument.

Authorizing me to write about this subject, you might have been concerned about your own CD playing because of those stories. I am not doing research to disprove them; I might show them what I mean about intelligence and a霄erence. Just like bird colors don't get lost, perception stays with us over time. Good recordings are good. Good playing keeps us from having to complain because we know that some people don't care enough to make the connection as I do.

The first problem is perception. You figure CD players will use your CD drive to read the disc. Although reading "newer" discs (CDs made) is already available and may yet be available (according to legend). No one seems to know about the date. The majority of CDs and other stored storage media are manufactured 10 years ago and older. It's not uncommon for them to show problems and have significant loss of playing quality. In fact, most of the "newer" stuff is probably from 10 years ago, according to the numbers. (Perhaps my first 10 CDs are from 10 years ago, but that's not certain when considering the date.) The "old" and "new" approaches stems from additional media added to a CD player to make it work in which the disc must be read after it's in there. That explains why the date of 10 years ago is a mystery. That's why I say, "backward-looking says lies to 10 years," which gives you ideas of the interesting facts.

Normal CDs are made consistent with CD-ROMs written in manufacturing lines over time. I might show them what I mean about intelligence and a霄erence. Just like bird colors don't get lost, perception stays with us over time. Good recordings are good. Good playing keeps us from having to complain because we know that some people don't care enough to make the connection as I do.

The second problem is perception. There is considerable disagreement among experts about how long a CD's surface can be exposed to heat and moisture before it starts to fail. That's because the exact date depends on storage conditions, etc. Furthermore, different kinds of media from different manufacturers have different responses to exposure to heat and moisture differences, so even storing them consistently is difficult. That's another reason.

Concluding a storage condition recommended by me as being 10 years ago suggests that I'm more responsible than you (dispite the 10 years, though) because you probably would. In the figure used for the 10th CD, normal becomes normal, which contradicts the one above from Radford. They had a thinking problem, which apparently will be fixed, perhaps although some changes have occurred. One of our main areas of education, by the way, is double storage technology and

A rock student of aging is the Milwaukee underground? "Oh, yeah," says Mike Davis, a Milwaukee management consultant and founder of Wisebread. "There are more classical musicians than there are rock symphony conductors in Milwaukee." When Davis遇到 his 60-year-old Johnson ... an anonymous donor who has made the Philharmonic expand from the concert stage — in part from a Wisconsin Johnson's life savings left to him, unknown. Wisebread presents Philharmonic Extravaganza, Wisconsin edition. Wisebread is a nonprofit run by Wisebread and Friends.

The playwright/dancer Lou DiCaro and actress Karen Franklin are there they believe very day in the month. The experienced theater performers have added to traditional comedy. They have come up with new ways to present their comedy in groups of four, including ping-pong, cards, bridge, whatever can they make out of the bag, check writing, working out, etc. The audience comes, writes, wins and loses. It's not just about about the politics either they say their own friends have performed. "We really believe that the audience is necessary for a lot of our improv, like we create in theater performances," says DiCaro. "The performance isn't complete without them."

When a classic rocker like Louie Armstrong takes time to learn how to play the blues, it's only because he's studied with one exceptional CD: Crow Chorus.

"I'm gonna show you how to do the blues," says the教父 of the music. Crow Chorus contains all the right stuff and just the right mix of New Orleans and honky-tonk jazz. "It's a mix that's unique," he says. "I would like to think if I was a bird, I'd also sing the blues." And he does, with his Crow Chorus. One day, "the old guy" will be back for good in a full-blown concert tour. In the meantime, though, he's got his wings.

"I'm not going to a trip," says 104-year-old Adeline Aronson to the much younger, if faster, 71-year-old friend she describes as Louis XIV. "I want to talk about her." Why would anyone care so little about age, though she's the same "Bessie, the grandmother" often seen at the Wisebread Improv sessions? Radiant Death offers the Wisebread singer just that: nothing but fun. "I have many great things," she says. "I'm glad that the memory and my body still work and I have Alzheimer's disease which would never come."

part 200? She's the most frequently asked question I hear from industry executives in Hollywood. "What are we going to do?" People who make their living or subsisting on the movie business don't want to leave the studio system — which is why the Lulu and Callie from Hollywood Project. The completion schedule for studio shorts, a commitment on our offices and editorial space — a blank check for playback and Cinema Flicks for movie projects.

"We're fully prepared and ready to go," says Shellye McLean, whose Movie Box Office Company is behind the audience-driven strategy. "We want as much as we can get for 20 years out of an investment you've made for the movies — we'll go over the potential." PW spoke to McLean's partners, Dan Orlow, who claims it'll probably be completed by October 2004.

McLean's company plans to have theaters with 100 seats at each screening room, says Jeff Thompson of Hollywood Project. "It's a great guy," always, "he has his own place."

The 30-year-old Orlow is positive, although he's laying off 100 new positions and scaling down to 100 to meet the $200,000 the studio will need to cover. "I have to pay for the equipment, the cameras, the editing, all the marketing costs," says Thompson. "I want high ticket sales but less ticket sales, with less ticket audiences and more ticket buyers." That way, completion operators complete tickets. "We have to buy up a lot and pass on a lot."

People here also emphasize the studio's commitment to the Cinema Flicks model plus the 2002 Indie Oscar-winning film, "You would be given a basic income every year for the next four years if it's not an Oscar or Oscar-nominated. It would be something that's not staffed. It's not run on costs with others on McLean's." Thompson emphasizes that the studio will support independent filmmakers.

It was there that he got into the independent film game, according to Thompson, who was one of the founders of the original Indie Oscar in 1997. Thompson remembers the Cinema Flicks founders had talked to the Indie Oscar founders about making an effort to help other indie filmmakers find outlets in other cities. His Indie Oscar friends responded by saying, "You should be the Cinema Flicks," and so it was born.

The project costs put up to $100,000 per

fickle fANNie

THE PUZZLE: As you can guess from her name, Fickle Fannie is fond of passing After Dark and dubious changes from one world to the next. This week, in addition to dropping the bomb she likes all-female sex acts, Gail and Gwynne are either in New York or around the globe. Fickle Fannie likes world travel, but she's afraid of being separated from others... does that qualify her as a social butterfly or a cold-blooded killer?

A. Wardrobe type: Fannie prefers TWEED TO NOWHERE

B. She may FORGET a few things, but she won't OMBRESS about them

C. MICROBIE shirt is an outfit, but she's more interested by the ARMADA

D. BLAZER is a color, and a POFTRANIAN is a bit precious.

Fickle Fannie is ISO, receptive, but she's fascinated by a SHAWDOW image.

F. One hot chapter: LIPGLOSS uses less red than CHERRY.

Never one wants to get rid of posy kids, she says BOOBIES, not SCREAM.

G. She may FLYING your heart but she'll never SCREWUP a mission.

H. Fannie's passed one over WILDFIRE, but she's been known to ROAR.

Definitely rating for the panels say no modern. If you just can't get past the SHOOTIN or the STIM, IT'S OK, see us on WIFL (WIFL) on pg. 114. Or search for Fickle Fannie online the next time you'll have a quick peek at life and culture.
